Buildwin media player usb device driver 08-30-2013, 10:54 PM cs_man Re: Buildwin media player usb device driver I think i might try that. I was thinking of trying to set the output to vga and use a nvidia HDMI to DVI adapter to HDMI from the usb. I will try to connect the earpiece. If I can get the headset to work, I will post back.

08-30-2013, 11:08 PM cs_man Re: Buildwin media player usb device driver Yes, that is the problem. The USB is the dongle on the side. I have tried finding a non beta driver for usb-snd_mp3player but it does not appear to be available anywhere.

08-31-2013, 01:40 AM cs_man Re: Buildwin media player usb device driver Thanks, I figured out how to set the output to vga and I was able to get audio. If you can find a driver for usb-snd_mp3player, please post it here for all to use. Also, if you find anything about this device, please post back.

09-01-2013, 01:09 AM cs_man Re: Buildwin media player usb device driver Greetings All, I am trying to get my USB MP3 Player (mp3 Player) to work with my Win 10 pro x64. The software to configure the earpiece attached to the USB MP3 Player and the software to control the USB MP3 Player are working. So I have internet, audio, video and photo capabilities. But the software to play the media files are not working. The USB Device which I believe to be the USB MP3 Player, is always absent in the Device Manager. However, I have found a couple of post here which states that if "the factory defaults did not work, then we need to boot into the Windows 7 or 8.1 option. ". When i boot into the Windows 7 option, I have the "USB\VID_0C45&PID_0000" listed in the list. If this is an USB 2.0, it should be listed as "USB\VID_0C45&PID_0001" in the Device Manager.

No matter which USB 2.0 device is chosen,

You are here Shahid Khan Shahid Khan gets too close for comfort Could the Pakistan Army's latest weapon against militants battling the Pakistani state succeed? Imad-ul-Haq is a political analyst in Islamabad who writes a column in the Dawn newspaper. He is the editor of the Web site RadicallyIslamTV.net, which monitors the actions of militant groups in Pakistan. With a flood of relief material, the Pakistani government is forging an official welcome for the militants who want to abandon the Taliban regime of the Afghan insurgency and join the fight in Pakistan against the American-led forces. Saturday, as the United States flew a C-17 transport plane loaded with aid supplies to the Pashtun-majority region that is awash with Pakistani Taliban fighters, reports appeared in the Pakistani press that gunmen belonging to an ultranationalist Islamist party in Pakistan's northwest have captured the provincial capital of Peshawar and that many people have died in the fighting. But the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan, or IMU, the Pakistani group accused of carrying out the recent September 2005 bombing in Bishkek, the capital of Kyrgyzstan, has denied that its men were in the Pakistani Taliban stronghold of Waziristan. According to the IMU, the propaganda war against "terrorists" in Pakistan is merely a means to disguise its involvement in the violence surrounding the contest for control of Afghanistan. Regardless of which outfit comes out on top in this round of political fighting, there is another uncomfortable truth for Pakistan.
