Q: React-Router-Dom - passing props when action is successful I'm building a React application using Create React App. I'm using React-Router-Dom because of some of the weird routing necessary in the application. The application structure is such that any node in the tree is clickable. If you click the right location in the tree, the right action is triggered. For example, a is clickable. Clicking on a activates the toProfileRouteAction() function. The function then returns the component with the correct prop from the parent. But this happens before the routing is even sent down to the child. So if I'm in the master index route, trying to go to the /name/peterProfile route, it will fail. Here's my router: const authRoutes = ( ) The component is set up like so: export const Profile = (props) => { let {id} = props let {userName} = props return ({userName} {userName}'s pets: {props.pets.length > 0 && props.pets.map(pet => {pet.name})}) } If I click on the profile route, it will return with a warning that it expects Seasonal variation in behavioural responses and health of honeybees to allatropins. Bees are becoming the focus of increasing attention as pollinators due to the decline in the number of managed and wild bee species. Insect allatropin, a neuropeptide, regulates brain development and reproductive processes, and has been suggested to regulate bee behaviour and physiology. The present study analysed the effects of a bee allatropin peptide (BETHRO, a peptidomimetic of allatotropin) on honeybee physiology and behaviour at different times of the year to determine if the endocrine patterns influence the sensitivity of behavioural/physiological responses to the peptide. We found that BETHRO was able to induce grooming, which is the most reported bee allatropin response, although the levels of this response varied between sampling times. Foraging and patrolling were the most sensitive responses to BETHRO. There was an increase in the response levels to BETHRO at some times of the year as compared to other times of the year. The endocrine patterns of bees can influence the behavioural sensitivity to allatropins in honeybees, and the results of our study confirm the importance of endocrine patterns in bee biology and show that the effects of the peptide can vary between times of the year.Retractable Door Handles Among the highly preferred and crucial fashion accessories for kitchens and bathrooms, retractable door handles will help improve the look of the doors and add considerable elegance to the structure.
